

Lev Lada'at website:

Brilliant & co.

On the Lev Lada'at website, we offer thousands of lesson plans in diverse areas of learning, developed for both elementary and high school, and help teachers construct varied, creative assessment tools. Also available on the website are hundreds of noteworthy articles, an online newspaper for teachers, hundreds of films that can be used in teaching that are arranged according to topics, and more.

Teacher Training: We provide training courses and workshops for teachers, principals and supervisors throughout the country and offer educational support for teachers in schools in all districts. Lev Lada'at has developed online courses for teachers and pedagogic coordinators that teach methods of meaningful learning and alternative assessment.

Lesson plan development - Lev Lada'at is involved in the development of lesson plans and content units for individuals interested in meaningful learning experiences that impact on their students' lives. Among our partners are: the National Library, the PJ Library, the Center for the Chassidic Story - Zusha, the Gush Katif Center and more.

Lev Lada'at

Are you a true educator? An educator whose love of teaching runs deep in the fiber of your being? Are you someone who tries to create learning that is meaningful, that affects change and impacts on your students' souls and lives?

We believe that each and every teacher has the potential to be a significant figure in the lives of his or her students, not only in discussions and informal educational activities, but also while teaching content and subject matter in class.

We believe that every classroom lesson can serve as an opportunity for a meaningful interaction between students and subject matter, and ultimately can serve as an opportunity for a positive encounter for students with themselves, their friends, the world and God.

Who are we?

The Lev Lada'at program, founded by the Department of Religious Education in cooperation with Herzog College, views learning as "knowledge that leads to enlightenment." We believe that true learning is learning that connects with the learner's heart and has a positive influence on the learner's life. We believe in the power of knowledge and learning, and in their ability to be meaningful, valuable and relevant to students.

At Lev Lada'at we believe in dealing with the big questions of in-school learning. We also believe in developing tools to create learning that is both meaningful and experiential. We aim to bridge the gap between the vibrant spirit of those dedicated to education and functional learning tools, between inspiration and practical application.

We aim to connect the intellect (da'at) with the heart (lev) by creating a holistic learning environment that addresses the student as a whole person, possessing powers of thought, imagination, emotion, and creativity.

Our goal is to promote meaningful learning, aimed at internalization and growth, in schools in the National Religious Education System.

We support Educational Subject Supervisors in the National Religious stream, promoting learning in different fields of knowledge, acting as partners in the development of teaching and learning materials, and helping teachers connect to the spark in every student by means of powerful learning that relates to their hearts and minds.
